RUSH OF THE WATERS

Incidents of the Big Flood Along the Northern Pacific.

FIGHTING SWIFT CURRENTS

The Devastation Wrought West of Iron Mountain is Something Terrible—Experiences Full of Hardships and Peril.

MISSOULA, June 2.—In all the history of this division of the Northern Pacific there has been no experience similar to that which Superintendent Brinson and Chief Dispatcher Dunkin have been having since the water began to rise in Clark's Fork. There seems to be no end to the amount of water that is pouring down from the mountains and flooding the valley west of Horse Plains. The force current, combined with the unprecedented volume of water that is coming down, makes it almost impossible to keep the roadbed in shape, despite the fact that the roadmasters have large forces of men at work night and day wherever the water threatens to overflow or undermine the track, and that is nearly the entire distance of the line west of Horse Plains. In fact, the statement of one of the train dispatchers made last night was not much exaggerated that "you can walk from Horse Plains to Hope on work trains, if you can jump the washouts."

There have been two pile drivers constantly at work for more than a week, and yet the water has been getting the upper hand of the workers. On Thursday night it seemed as if everything was all right once more and the delayed trains were started east and west out of Hope and Horse Plains. Two east bound trains had been waiting at the former place for two days, and both were started out as soon as the breaks had been repaired. The first train got safely across the bridge at Clark's Fork, but when the second reached the bridge, 10 minutes later, the west approach had gone out again, and while the trainmen were investigating, 100 feet of the piling went into the stream. The west bound trains, two in number, that had been held at Horse Plains, were started out at the same time and had a similar experience, a washout at Eddy separating them and making it impossible to consolidate the two and turn one of them east as No. 2.

This state of affairs continues at the present writing, the four trains, with an additional eastbound train at Hope, being held until the breaks in the track can be filled. Friday's No. 1 was turned at Ravalli and came back into Missoula at 10 o'clock that evening, waiting here until 4 o'clock this morning, when it went east as No. 2, taking a large number of people who have been delayed in this city from one to three days, waiting for an east-bound train. There was great rejoicing among these at the prospect of getting home or continuing business trips, and probably a happier lot of people never boarded a train than they, although in all their grumbling they could not fail to enjoy the beauties of Missoula, which in a measure allayed the annoyance which the delay occasioned.

The reports which come in from the Coeur d'Alene branch indicate that the damage to that line has not been exaggerated by the statements which have already been published. A Western Union lineman, who had been sent out to repair the wire and restore communication between Wallace and Missoula, returned Thursday evening without having accomplished his mission. He reports the devastation by the water beyond Iron Mountain as almost incredible, the entire roadbed being swept away in many places, the damage in Spring gulch being especially heavy, several bridges being gone, and in some places the right of way having gone out with the flood. He found the telegraph wire submerged for nearly half a mile in one place in water so deep and so swift that it was impossible to restore the line. It is not easy to estimate the extent of the damage at present, but it is certain that the road cannot be repaired for less than several tens of thousands of dollars.

The present condition of affairs is unusual, as in previous years the east end of this division from Gold Creek to Elliston has been the scene of the heavy washouts and the damage to the main line west of here has been inconsiderable. The present state of things is attributed to the unusual volume of water that is coming down the Bitter Root, Jocko and Flathead rivers. Lightning creek, too, is keeping up its reputation and last evening the track at this point was reported as impassable.

There have been several rough experiences reported during the past few days, some of them, as is usually the case, having a ludicrous side. Charles Wing had a difficult trip coming in from his mine at DeBorgia this week, and is now waiting in town until travel becomes easier before returning. The first 20 miles from DeBorgia he made on a handcar and then, after walking several miles, he caught a work train, which gave him quite a lift on his journey. After he had reached the end of the work train he had a walk of 11 miles, being compelled to make numerous wide detours to get around the washouts. He finally reached Iron Mountain, where he secured a team and drove to town. The trip was full of danger and difficulty and Mr. Wing does not care to repeat it.

Among the amusing incidents of the high water experience the adventures of a number of butchers at Locke & Knappman's slaughter house below town is perhaps deserving of first place. On the afternoon of the first rapid rise of the water in the Missoula, three of these men were killing cattle and were so busily engaged that they did not observe that the river had surrounded them, cutting off their avenue of return. When their work was done it was nearly dark and they could not see sufficiently well to attempt to ford the swift stream. They were obliged to remain in the slaughter house all night and in the morning to swim ashore. They reached town safely and secured a boat in which the beef was ferried across. Mr. Locke was in some way left at the slaughter house this time, and it is reported that he had to swim across the stream between that place and the bank.

SPORTS IN MISSOULA.

The Horses Are Doing Well and So Also Are the Crack Shots.

MISSOULA, June 2.—The high water has not affected the condition of affairs at the race track, and the prospects of a good meeting on the Fourth and of the success of the circuit meeting later are brighter than ever. The horses in training are all in good trim, except Florida, whose lameness of last year is said to be causing her considerable trouble by its return this season. Of the others, R. D. F., the converted pacer of the Higgins stable, is probably making the best showing, and he continues to surprise his friends by the remarkable speed which he has developed recently and which promises to make him one of the famous horses of the year. He is making a record as a "side wheeler" that will astonish some of the foreigners when they get here. The speed of Rona N., the nervy little gray mare of the Higgins stable, is apparently not less than last season, when she did so well. The other horses of the stable are doing well under Trainer Jeffries' care, and their work up to date is satisfactory.

Trainer Carrigan's string is doing good work and his green horses are coming into line in good shape. Bush Smith is pleased with the way his gallopers are coming on, and even Harbinger, Mr. Palmer's contrary sorrel, is feeling the influence of the summer weather and is doing better than he has before.

Senator Hoffman's stable will be here next week and will make the track a lively place. These horses are said to be in fine condition and will be an important addition to the animals at the park.

If the members of the Missoula Gun club continue to shoot as they are doing at present, they will bring home from the Helena tournament a fair share of the prizes and will add considerably to the already enviable record of the club. The informal shoot at the club grounds Wednesday was an excellent showing for the participants and some good scores were made. Beside the usual contestants there were present Captains Rodman and Lockwood of the visiting officers at Fort Missoula, and Captain Andrews. The first event was a team shoot, Harry and Devel captains, and was a close contest, Harry's team winning by a narrow margin. Among the subsequent events, an interesting one was 10 singles, unknown traps and angles. This was a new form of sport for the local shooters and was not at all easy for them. The honors were divided by Harry and Brayton, each killing eight birds out of a possible 10. In the other contests, Devel, Menard and Harry divided honors, the last named leading the others slightly. Bob Rodgers is still absent in the Coeur d'Alene, being hemmed in at Saltese by washouts, and his part of the shoots is greatly missed. He wore away the gold medal and, although it has been won twice since he has been away, he still wears it.

Baseball is gaining ground once more in this city. The local team contains some excellent material, but shows great lack of practice. If the men could get together for a little team drill, it would do them much good and would enable them to put up a good, strong game. The Fort Missoula nine has some good players and has also the advantage of practice, but it's a safe bet that the Missoula team can outplay the soldiers after a little practice. One thing Missoula boasts is an umpire that is a world beater in his line. He can run faster, yell louder and jump higher than any other man in the business. His decisions are not an ordinary shade of lemon yellow, but are a deep rich orange that sheds a hue over the whole ground.

It's a remedy prescribed for delicate women, for all the derangements, disorders, and diseases of the sex.
